Indigenous self-identification

Providing this information is optional. We use it to keep those who self-identify informed of available services, and to help us improve our support for First Nations, Inuit, Métis, American Indian/Alaskan Native/Native Hawaiian, applicants, and Indigenous applicants from outside North America. By self-identifying, you consent to being contacted by McGill's Office of Indigenous Initiatives, First People's House, and Enrolment Services, or other admissions offices. You may be requested to provide additional information to access certain opportunities reserved for Indigenous students.

McGill respects that Indigenous Peoples have the right to identify themselves in ways not enumerated in the groupings/categories below. These groupings/categories are structured in this way to allow for McGill to match Indigenous students with distinction-based opportunities, as the opportunities available to Indigenous students may have varying eligibility criteria.

McGill is dedicated to the presence and success of Indigenous students.
